

Apple Event: CEO Tim Cook Addresses iPhone Security ...

Apple, DOJ to Face Off Over iPhone Encryption

Valeant Seeks CEO, Alleges Improper Actions by CFO

LAW BLOG

The Supreme Court Emoji Challenge

By JACOB GERSHMAN

0 COMMENTS

Mar 18, 2016 3:01 pm ET

PHOTO: OXFORD DICTIONARIES

It's been a somber and tense time these last few weeks at the Supreme Court.

So Law Blog is lightening things up a bit on this Friday and inviting readers to take the Supreme Court Emoji Challenge.

The quiz comes courtesy of insurance lawyer Randy Maniloff, who featured it in the latest edition of his Coverage Opinions legal newsletter, which explains:

The other night I was out to dinner with my 9 year old daughter. As we waited for her mac & cheese to arrive I decided to give her a lesson on the Supreme Court. I figured I'd start with the basic operation of the federal judiciary. From there move on to some landmark Supreme Court cases. And by dessert we'd be discussing the Necessary and Proper Clause. But she wanted no part of it – begging me to stop.

So I took a different tack. I'd tell her about a case and then she would use my phone to find emojis to write out the case name.

Can you identify the following landmark Supreme Court decisions as represented by emoji:*

-
-
-
-
-
-
-
-
-
-

Law Blog came up with a bonus one:

*Click here for the answers.